BEFORE YOU START

Hi, I'm Natalia

For years I tried one approach after another without really listening to my body. What helped most was learning to notice how food, sleep and stress showed up in how I felt. This diary helps you do the same.

How to use it

1. Start with your self-care wheel. It takes about 5 minutes.
2. Then fill in one page a day for 7 days. Each page takes about 5 minutes, and the evening works well.
3. Write what you notice, not what you think you should have done. There are no right answers.
4. No calories, no weighing, no targets. If writing down food ever makes you anxious, skip that part.
5. On day 7, use the "Spot your patterns" page.
6. Then, if you like, bring your diary to a free call.

Before day 1

Read page 4, "Food and how you feel". It shows which signs and foods to look out for. If you chose a focus when you signed up, keep it in mind as you fill in your daily pages.

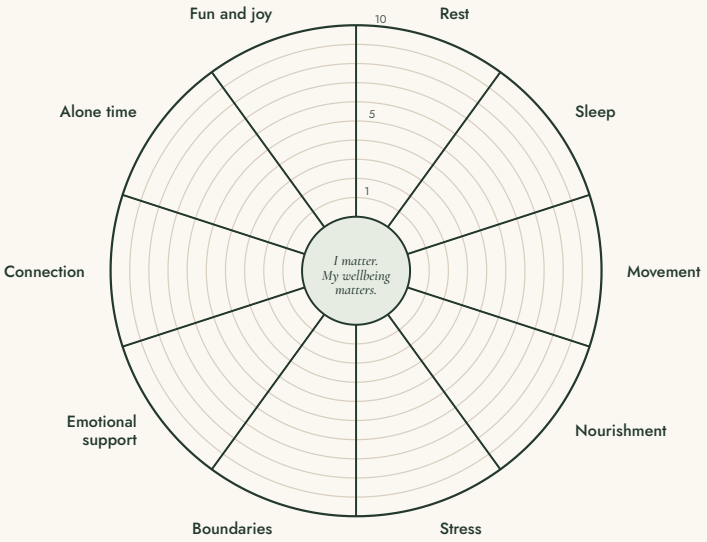

You can print this diary or fill it in on screen: click any line or box to type.

YOUR SELF-CARE WHEEL

A snapshot of your wellbeing

Rate each area from 1 to 10, where 1 = I feel very unsupported here and 10 = I feel very well supported. Shade each slice up to your number.

This isn't about being perfect. It's about noticing, with curiosity, not judgement.

| | Score |
|---|---|
| RestTaking breaks, pausing and giving myself permission to rest | |
| SleepGetting enough good sleep most nights | |
| MovementMoving my body in ways that feel good to me | |
| NourishmentEating in a way that supports my energy and health | |

| BoundariesSaying no when I need to, and protecting my time, energy and peace | |
| Emotional supportHaving people I can talk to | |
| ConnectionFeeling connected to others and that I belong | |
| Alone timeTime on my own to recharge and reflect | |
| Fun and joyMaking time for things that bring me joy and laughter | |

Reflection

Which area needs attention most?

Which area feels easiest to improve?

What have I been putting last?

Small steps add up. Be kind to yourself.

If you're finding things very hard emotionally, please talk to your GP or someone you trust. Samaritans are there day or night on 116 123 (UK and Ireland).

Food and how you feel

Sometimes a food doesn't suit you for a while. Your diary can help you notice it. Read this before day 1, so you know what to look out for. After day 7, page 13 helps you look back.

Reactions aren't always quick

Some show up within an hour or two. Others take a day, or even two or three. So when you feel off, look back over the last few days, not only your last meal.

It isn't only your tummy

In your tummy

- Bloating or wind
- Heartburn
- Loose or hard stools
- Tummy ache

Elsewhere

- Feeling tired after meals
- Headaches
- Skin flare-ups
- Low mood or feeling irritable
- A foggy head
- A blocked or runny nose

Foods people often notice

Dairy · Wheat and gluten · Eggs · Soy · Nuts and sesame · Corn · Citrus fruit · Tomatoes, peppers and potatoes · Coffee and alcohol · Very sugary or rich meals

This list is only a starting point. Your clues may look different, and that's normal. Most people find that most of these foods suit them well.

See your GP first if you notice blood in your poo, weight loss you can't explain, bloating or tummy pain that doesn't go away, tiredness for weeks without a clear reason, painful or infected-looking skin, very irregular periods or bleeding between periods. A food diary can't explain these, so they're worth checking.

Call 999 (UK) or 112 (Europe) if your lips, face or throat swell, or you find it hard to breathe, soon after eating.

DAY 7

Spot your patterns

Look back over your week. Highlight anything that comes up more than once.

1 On your best-energy days, what was different? Think about sleep, meals, stress and movement.

2 Was there a time of day when your energy dipped? What came just before?

3 Did your tummy feel different after certain meals, at certain times, or on busier days?

4 Did your skin or mood change with stress, sleep or your cycle?

5 Look at your self-care wheel again. Did your lowest areas show up in your week?

6 What's one small thing that seemed to help?

My three notes from this week

1

Patterns are clues, not answers. One week can't tell you what is causing something, so please don't cut out whole food groups because of it. That's something to look at with support.

Reading your diary for food clues

After your 7 days, look back with fresh eyes. You're looking for something that repeats.

1. Mark the days you felt off.
2. Look back 1 to 3 days. What did you eat and drink?
3. Look for a repeat: the same food and the same feeling, two or three times.
4. Check the other suspects: a short night, a busy day, your cycle. They can bring on similar feelings.
5. Write your clue below as a question, not a verdict.

My food clues

| Food or drink | What I noticed | How long after | How many times | Anything else going on? |
|---|---|---|---|---|

Why I don't suggest cutting foods out on your own

Cutting out foods without a plan can make your meals less varied, leave gaps in nutrients, and still not give you an answer. Often a clue turns out to be stress, sleep or your cycle. If you find one, bring it to your free call and we can look at it together.

If you suspect wheat or gluten, ask your GP about a blood test before you cut it out. The test only works while you're still eating it.

If food ever feels stressful or frightening, or eating has been hard for you in the past, please talk to your GP before you change what you eat.

YOUR NEXT STEP

Bring your diary and your wheel to a free call

You've spent a week noticing, and that's often the hardest part. In a free 20-minute video call, you tell me what you noticed and what you'd like to change, and we see if working together is right for you. If we do work together, your diary gives us a head start. There's no obligation to book.
